How do you fit a radpack radiator?

RadPack also claims to reflect 95% of lost heat back in the room and, thanks to the use of self adhesive pads, you should be able to cover more or less the entire back of each radiator for maximum effect. Fitting simply requires cutting the material to size with a pair of scissors, then cutting slits for it to fit over the radiator brackets.

How do you fit a curved radiator?

Fitting takes minutes: cut the sheets to size with a pair of scissors and then suspend them using the supplied clips which hang on the radiator's wall brackets. Once installed, they can't be seen. And they can mount on curved radiators, although the process is a little more complicated.

How do you fit a radiator?

Fitting requires little more than dangling it down the back of the radiator and moving it until it pings to the metal. The beauty of this solution is that they will only require cutting in certain circumstances, and they can easily be removed to give them a wipe periodically.
