The Coupling Capacitor is a highly sensitive partial discharge (PD) sensor used to decouple PD from the monitored conductor. Coupling Capacitors are installed as close to the winding as possible for maximum sensitivity. Applications include generators, switchgear, motors, Iso-phase bus and transformers.

So, both coupling and blocking capacitors are the same - a charged capacitor acting as a constant voltage source. But in the first case it is connected in series while in the second - in parallel to another voltage source. And both coupling and blocking capacitors do the same - they keep the voltage across themselves constant. Only, in the ...

Over the years, with much experimenting and listening, I have found that a very major part of amplifier sound quality is directly due to the input coupling capacitors used. This is equally true for the output coupling capacitors of the preamp. Certainly the designer of the circuitry must do the job properly, but given that this is

The reason that different value capacitors are used in by-passing or decoupling is to avoid the self resonance and lossy performance that one capacitor may exhibit. A .1 uF capacitor may be a good low impedance bypass at 500 kHz, but usually not very effective at 800 MHz. By using two capacitors in parallel, like a 270 pF for the Higher ...

Coupling capacitors (or dc blocking capacitors) are use to decouple ac and dc signals so as not to disturb the quiescent point of the circuit when ac signals are injected at the input. Bypass capacitors are used to force signal currents around elements by providing a low impedance path at the frequency. +-30 k? 10 k? 4.3 k? V CC=12V R 3 R 2 v s R 1 R C R S 100 k? 1.3 k? R ...
