Deep cycle lead-acid batteries are rated at their 20 hour rate, i.e. if you discharged a 100Ah battery at 5A it would be completely discharged in 20 hours. If you discharge it at 20A, you'll be discharging it at the 5 hour rate and it's useable capacity will be reduced by around 20%. Lithium batteries do not suffer from this problem, however depending on the internal resistance of the ...
