Are batteries a success or a failure?

In the tangle of policies making up the EU's industrial strategy, batteries actually stand out as a relative success. The European Commission includes them in "important projects of common European interest", making it easier to kick-start manufacturing with public subsidies.

Are European battery projects being scrapped or scaled down?

So news that European battery projects are being scrapped or seriously scaled down is an important sign of things going wrong, especially as the disappointments do not appear to be due to Europe's well-known but slow-to-fix handicaps on technology, raw materials and energy costs.

What happened to Northvolt?

Then, Northvolt's production plan began to fall apart, and people working at its main plant mysteriously started to die. The enthusiasm was palpable when Northvolt finally opened the doors to its lithium-ion plant in the small Swedish town of Skelleftea, near the Arctic Circle, in 2021.

Are slowing electric vehicle sales a problem?

The issue is, rather, that slowing electric vehicle sales have undermined expectations of market demand for the battery capacity that was to come on stream. This exemplifies a broader problem: a private sector deeply lacking in faith that its political leaders can move from words to action.
